Weeds in Water and Surface Scum Injure Bathing

Appearance of surface weeds and scum has made bathing and swimming unpleasant at several of the river beaches. The weeds line the banks up to Lake Koshong and much of the scum comes down from the lake.

On Tuesday night the Goose Island beach was free from the weeds and the beach on the west side of the river in the rear of the hospital at "first sand-bar" was thickly coated. Hundreds, however, went in Tuesday despite the weeds.

Thousands and logs were placed up the river to collect the scum, preventing it flowing down into the beach.

The long period of excessive hot water is declared to be the cause for the early appearance of the river scum and weeds, which generally appear during August or September, when the water is declared to be unhealthy.

CLASSIFICATION OF ROADS AUTHORIZED

Highway Truck Control Measure Signed by Governor Blaine.

[By Associated Press.] Madison.—Wisconsin highways are to be classified and the use of trucks limited as result of signature by Governor Blaine, last week, of a bill authorizing the highways bill.

Truck manufacturers and operators throughout the state had exerted strong pressure on the governor to veto the measure.

The highway commission before Jan. 1, will work out the classification and publish a map of Wisconsin showing the classification. It is also provided that, before Jan. 1, every truck to be operated in the state must have lettered on its side the weight without load, the weight with load, carrying capacity, and the weight of the vehicle and load together.

For good cause the state highway commission may establish an embargo on certain roads for a specific time, usually in the spring and fall.

Application of this measure, which restricts the backing of farmer members, will cause confusion and hardship, trade men claim. Their contention is opposed by friends of the measure who say it is needed to save the highways from destruction due to heavy truck traffic.

A juvenile bureau in the state board of control is established through signature by Governor Blaine to a senate committee on education and public welfare bill. Appropriation of $7,500 annually is given.

COLLEGE COURSE FOR HOTEL MEN CONVENTION PLAN

Chicago. — A college course for hotel men leading to the degree of bachelor of arts is being planned in connection with the convention of the American Hotel Association, The American Caterers' association, and the exposition of the American Hotel and Restaurant Equipment association.

E. L. Thornton, newly elected president of the Caterers' association, predicts the entire country will be eating in caterers in a few years.

Jacob Miller for 40 years a hotel steward, told the convention Tuesday that cooking is a lost art in the American home and asserted the American woman has forgotten how to cook.

It is hoped that John Callahan, superintendent of public instruction will be able to attend the Rock county convention and speak. If he attends, he will probably speak on his policy in connection with rural schools.

Board members attending all day will receive remuneration from their districts. The clerk of each district is expected to attend. Attendance is requested of other district officials but is not compulsory. The convention in this county in the past has always been attended by a large majority of officials. Early crops and the hot weather may have some effect on the attendance Thursday.

Music by Miss Jacobson. Miss Louise Jacobson of the Teachers Training school will lead the music which will open the session at 9:45. Reports will be given by Sup. Anders at 10 o'clock and Rev. Ivar Ramstad will speak on "What a Clerk Thinks of Rural Schools."

George S. Dick, Madison, inspector of rural schools, will speak in the morning on legislation for rural schools and in the afternoon on "The Problems of Consolidation." These topics are especially interesting to school district officials in Rock county owing to the large number of consolidation projects started within the past year. Mr. Dick has been called into consultation on consolidation of schools here before and his address on this subject is considered important.

Hotter Rural Schools. President P. S. Fryer of the White-water Normal school will address the convention in the afternoon on the improvements which can be made for better rural schools. Lake Winds Help. Kenosha.—Occasional winds from Lake Michigan have kept the current heat-wave in Kenosha from becoming as oppressive as last week's temperatures; nevertheless, with the mercury around the 90 mark, the municipal bathing beach has done a record business.

Gets Early Start. Racine.—With street thermometers early Wednesday morning registering 92 to 94 degrees, the unusually oppressive weather continued, with little prospect of relief. A marked absence of heat prostrations is an outstanding incident.

Stiffing Night. Milwaukee.—Another day of extreme heat was promised in Milwaukee, the 8 a. m. registration being 84 degrees. Tuesday night was stifling throughout, with little or no breeze stirring.

Relief in Green Bay.—The heat wave apparently was broken Wednesday morning when the thermometer registered 74 degrees after a rain. Tuesday was the second hottest day of the year, the government thermometer registering 89 at 4 p. m.

70 Boys Hear Camping Plans—Seventy boys gathered at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night to listen to final instructions before going to Rotarade camp at Lauderdale lake, which opens Thursday for the first 10 day period, under the direction of Mr. A. C. Preston, of the Y. M. C. A. Forty boys will leave the Chamber of Commerce in cars provided by the Rotary club at 2:30 p. m. Thursday.

Several Rotarians came to the meeting and discussed plans devised through Mr. Preston's suggestions for camp work with high school boys who will assist as tent leaders. The second camp period will open Saturday, July 23.

A few places in this period are still open and boys who wish to register to attend should call Mr. Preston at the Y. M. C. A. and after Thursday, the Rev. J. A. Melrose.

When 11 Lived in a Log Cabin Here, 86 Years Ago—A log house roughly put together, 16 by 18 feet, housed 11 people in the winter of 1835-36 in what is now the city of Janesville.

In the house was Samuel St. John, who came from Vermont with his wife and three children in November, 1835. Here he was joined by Dr. James Heath with his wife and family who remained that winter with the St. Johns in the cabin.

All this was the beginning of Janesville. Here the first baby of the city was born—a son of St. John.

In memory of this historical event and to perpetuate the coming of people to the beginnings of the settlement, the Daughters of the American Revolution will dedicate a boulder at the St. John cabin site, on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with appropriate ceremonies.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT SCHOOL MEETING

Convention of Clerks' and Teachers Institute Opens Thursday.

About 500 clerks and other officials of the rural school districts of Rock county will gather at the Janesville high school at 9:45 Thursday morning to attend the county school board convention and teachers institute and discuss educational problems with which they are confronted.

There are 34 school districts in Rock county, one of the largest groups in the state, and each has its separate board and officers. The Rock county convention is the first one to be held this year, a majority of the counties holding conventions in the fall.

Callahan Is Expected. It is hoped that John Callahan, superintendent of public instruction will be able to attend the Rock county convention and speak. If he attends, he will probably speak on his policy in connection with rural schools.

Board members attending all day will receive remuneration from their districts. The clerk of each district is expected to attend. Attendance is requested of other district officials but is not compulsory. The convention in this county in the past has always been attended by a large majority of officials. Early crops and the hot weather may have some effect on the attendance Thursday.

Music by Miss Jacobson. Miss Louise Jacobson of the Teachers Training school will lead the music which will open the session at 9:45. Reports will be given by Sup. Anders at 10 o'clock and Rev. Ivar Ramstad will speak on "What a Clerk Thinks of Rural Schools."

George S. Dick, Madison, inspector of rural schools, will speak in the morning on legislation for rural schools and in the afternoon on "The Problems of Consolidation." These topics are especially interesting to school district officials in Rock county owing to the large number of consolidation projects started within the past year. Mr. Dick has been called into consultation on consolidation of schools here before and his address on this subject is considered important.

JANESVILLE PEOPLE ARE DESCENDANTS OF SERGT. WM. HARLOWE

Alderman John Harlowe, of the First ward, and Mrs. Harry Garbutt, of Janesville, are direct descendants of Sergt. William Harlowe, who built one of the few remaining buildings at Plymouth, Mass.

This house is one of the features of the celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims, now going on at Plymouth, and reaching its height Wednesday with the great pageants described in the Gazette, Tuesday.

This Harlowe home is one of the few remaining buildings which stood within the life-time of any of those who came on the Mayflower. It was erected in 1677, and framed with oak timbers from the old fort, which as Winslow relates, "was built in 1622 on the top of the hill under which the town was located."

After King Philip's war, when danger from Indian depredations had passed, the fort was dismantled and the timbers sold to Sergt. William Harlowe, a man of prominence in the colony, who used them in the construction of his house on the old highway where it still stands.

Mrs. Harry Garbutt, an active member of the local chapter of the daughters of the American Revolution, has her membership in that organization through the Sergt. Harlowe ancestry.

Will Ask Bids on P. O. Lighting Job—Plans and specifications for installation of the new electric lighting system for the Janesville post office, as recommended by Mr. Haverstick, federal building inspector, have been received by Postmaster Cunningham. Bids will be asked soon. The present system is inadequate. Estimated cost will be about $600.

Y. M. Directors Have Monthly Meeting—Monthly routine business was transacted by directors of the Janesville Y. M. C. A. at 4:30 Tuesday. President, A. E. Matheson presided. George Jacobs, William McVicar and Superintendent Frank Holt were not present.

Discuss Extension of School Course—Superintendent O. D. Antisdel attended a meeting at Footville Tuesday called to discuss the addition of another year to the high school course. The school has two years' training. A canvass is to be taken of the township.

NO SECRET MEET ON DISARMAMENT

Outside Nations Will Know Deliberations of Conference in U. S.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
Copyright 1921, by Janesville Gazette.

Washington.—The disarmament conference of the great powers to be held here next autumn will not be a secret convocation. Although the invitations were limited to Great Britain, Japan, the U. S., France, the United States and China, the other nations of the world will have an opportunity to keep posted on what is being done and to offer a contribution through diplomatic channels any suggestions or ideas bearing on a solution of the problem that come up for discussion.

The government here felt that, by asking the group known as the principal allied and associated powers, more progress could be made than by attempting to have a big assembly which might resolve itself into a debating society and get no results. As one official spokesman of the administration phrased it today, the conference call by Mr. Harding is not "a shout in the air" but an attempt "to get results."

Eastern Problem Great
The same official, who of course is conversant with every phase of our foreign policy, made it clear that it was useless to talk about disarmament if the problems of the Far East are not settled, or Europe's satisfaction. He pointed out that as long as people felt insecure about developments in the Pacific there would be no inclination to dispense with naval armament. In other words, where the sources of possible friction and war were removed once for all in the Pacific there would be much more rapid progress toward disarmament. This indeed is the answer made by government officials to the criticism that the disarmament conference should not have included a discussion of Far Eastern problems and that the tactics over the latter would delay and obstruct the disarmament movement itself. But the government takes just the opposite view—namely, until the questions pending with Japan, China and the European and American nations over the Far East are out of the way, no body will make a sincere move toward limiting armaments. The fact is the conference called by President Harding is an endeavor to achieve practical results in the field of diplomacy at the same time that an agreement on naval disarmament is attempted. Heretofore the main excuse for armament has been some spectre of war. The United States government, along with the British and French and Italian governments, which have interests in the Far East, will now seek to establish a series of common principles so as to make it impracticable for Japan or China to get tangled up in disputes that will involve the powers across the Pacific.

Problem of Russia
The problem of Russia injects itself incidentally with a big international mark. Heretofore in every Far Eastern dispute handled by the great powers, whether it included an expression of opinion on the open door commercially, such as Secretary John Hay elicited, or whether it touched questions of territorial integrity, Russia and Germany were always consulted. In fact they were principals in the discussion. But Germany is powerless. She has been disarmed and disarmed. The only Versailles is considered important so far as jeopardizing anybody's interest in the Far East. As for Russia, none of the big powers, least of all the United States, feel that Russian co-operation at this time can be attained. Russia has put herself out of the family circle so far as having a voice in the decisions of the powers is concerned. But Russia will eventually be bound just the same as will be Germany to subscribe to the general principles that will be involved in the parties' Far Eastern questions here next fall. Something more specific and more binding than John Hay's open air policy, though founded on the same ideas of equity and justice, will be formulated with all the solemnity of a treaty obligation. Possibly it will not be a mere exchange of notes, for that process has its disadvantages in the fact that changing administrations can ignore the action of their predecessors, but probably a treaty or convention will be negotiated which will make it unnecessary for the English to renew their alliance with the Japanese. It will put all nations on a par and remove the so-called "sphere of influence" as well as the "special interests" which were back of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

Regional Understanding
Such a treaty or convention would be a "regional understanding" and as such is permitted by the covenant of the league of nations. While America is not a member of the league, nevertheless all the other powers are bound by the covenant not to make any treaty inconsistent with that document, and that making of a regional understanding is wholly in line with the principles of the covenant. The object of the regional understanding will be not to protect special interests but to promote the general peace. Russia and Germany in due time would become subscribers to the principles enunciated at the Washington conference. They will not eventually be admitted to the councils of the powers until they recognize and agree to such principles.
Thus the smaller group of powers which might resolve itself into a handicapped as was the Versailles conference by the large number of delegates which means endless discussion, but will draw up agreements while in the making will be shown to all nations that may be interested, and thus in effect offer a program of peace to the whole world, including simply naval disarmament but the abolition of poisonous gases and the limitation of air as well as land and sea weapons of destruction.

TOWN OF MILTON LIGHT CASE HEARD

Judge Grimm Listens to Arguments by Gettle and Oestreich.

Arguments were heard by Judge George Grimm in the Rock county circuit court Tuesday afternoon on the injunction proceedings taken on the part of the Town of Milton against the McGowan Water, Light and Power company of Milton and Milton Junction. The case is a complex, involving the town of Milton to purchase the utility company, and which has been before the state railroad commission and in the Dane county circuit court. L. B. Gettle, attorney for the McGowan company, appeared for the utility company, and Otto Oestreich for the town.

The town of Milton voted to acquire the McGowan plant of the McGowan company at an election, the purchase issue being passed by a decided majority. Steps were taken before the railroad commission to complete the purchase and at that time the McGowan company opposed the purchase and started counter suit. Now the situation is reversed. On the claim that the well of the McGowan company was on private property, the town of Milton obtained an injunction restraining the defendant company from furthering proceedings to require the town to buy the plant. The town board stipulated the McGowan company to buy the utility plant and the arguments before Judge Grimm were based on whether the town could now stop in the purchasing proceedings.

The case was established. After lengthy arguments and presentation of legal evidence, the court reserved decision, taking the case under advisement. The McGowan company was granted judgment and a title to property in Clinton, which was involved in her suit against Henry K. and Albert King, J. T. Irish, George and John Smith, John and Mary Ann Warren, T. M. Martin, Mrs. M. O. Weaver, Mary O. Weaver in the Rock county circuit court. Title to the property in dispute was established by testimony of Judge Grimm.

Richard Saxby was granted a divorce from Catherine L. Saxby on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

The committee will be held at 5 p. m. Wednesday to investigate published reports, if found true, the legion will demand the removal of Mr. Gordon from office.

Policewoman on Job Here

"My work in Janesville, as I see it, will be largely welfare and prevention work," said Miss Margaret Kavanaugh, Janesville's new policewoman, who was at headquarters Wednesday. "I do not know exactly what line of work the new police chief will have for me, but I will do as I am instructed for the good of the department and Janesville. I suppose my work here will be along lines of policewomen in other cities, the aim being prevention of crime rather than punishment or court action after they are committed. There is supervision at the public dances, parks and at the movies. One is naturally interested in welfare work for girls and youths." The new policewoman talked as if she were confident of success with her work and in Janesville. It was apparent she was waiting for specific instructions from the new police chief and was unwilling to commit herself until policies had been determined and outlined.

UNIVERSAL METER SERVICE ORDERED

Board of Public Works Acts; Water Department Given Till Jan. 1.

Water meters have been ordered installed for all water service in Janesville, as a result of a decision of the Board of Public Works. The order to install meters now is being sent out, with the time limit as being Jan. 1, 1922, for the districts within the fire limits of the city. "The order must be followed or water service will be discontinued for the decision will be strictly enforced. It was stated at the city hall Wednesday.

At the present time the city has 3,397 services for water of which 2,781 are meters, leaving but 1136 flat rate service. In order to comply with this order the water department must set three meters each working day from the present date until July 1, 1922, with present workmen. Orders for the meters must be filed before next January. It is claimed that 65 per cent of the water used is by people having flat rates.

The consumption of water in Janesville has increased more than 100 per cent in three years time. The present consumption is almost doubled over the daily average during the winter months. The meter during the cold weather is 2,000,000 gallons a day while now more than 3,500,000 gallons are pumped daily at the station.

Walks Warm? Skeptic Fries Egg as Proof

It's hot enough to fry eggs! This statement was made by a skeptical reporter of the Gazette, who is from Missouri, Tuesday.

An egg, not the cold storage kind either, was broken and placed on a sidewalk on North Bluff street at 2 in the afternoon when the temperature was 100 in the shade. "The process of cooking was slow but in an hour and a half the egg was cooked without artificial heat. To have recorded the correct temperature at the point where the egg cooked, a thermometer with an extension would have been needed, as the mercury shot to the highest figure, 120.

POLICE DENY THAT THERE WAS NEGLECT IN AUTO SPEED CASE

Police Chief Thomas Morrissey and the police department refused to accept the blame laid at their doors by Alderman J. K. Jensen, who during the council meeting Monday declared that the police "let go a violator and paid him his money back." The case alleged to be that complaint made by Alderman Jensen against John Mandell, who was arrested by a patrolman at the direction of the alderman.

"We had no evidence ourselves of the violation and when the case was brought in we had him put up $25 bail for his appearance to answer the complaint of Alderman Jensen," said Police Chief Morrissey. The morning Mandell appeared, we attempted to locate Mr. Jensen but failed. There was nothing to do but pay him back the bond money, for we knew he could be located at any time. Afterward he was brought into court and finally pleaded guilty to pay a fine of $10 and costs. The witness and complainant was Mr. Jensen for none of the department directly knew of the violation. We had orders to pay back the bond money when we failed to locate the alderman."

Alderman Jensen further declared that it was through his assistance that the case was prosecuted and "so far as the police were concerned the case would have been dropped."

"I was at my office all day except for about 10 minutes in the forenoon, when the case was to have been called and was not notified," he said.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor Gazette:

I want to say that I am in deep sympathy with the Gazette in the stand it takes against a saloon or a saloon license of any description. I've need no saloons of any kind, as the Gazette says. The more we have of them, the more trouble will the police have to watch them and the more disgraced to our city.

There has never any good come of them and so far as I have talked with people on the subject, nine out of every ten people will agree with me, that they are a nuisance and ever they are. I and many of the citizens are glad of the stand that the Mayor has taken in standing for economy in city affairs, especially on noisy matters but I do not think that the Mayor did not think of this when he had his car repaired at the expense of the taxpayers as I understand he did. If this is so, as the council has done nothing about it, I suppose the tax-payers have to foot the bill. If the tax-payers have to do this, it is surely an imposition on the city.

Prosperity Near, Convention Told

Chicago.—Prosperity is coming toward a new era of prosperity, full of hope, regardless of what the calamity howlers say, O. W. Timm, of Plymouth Wis., president of the Illinois and Wisconsin Coal Dealers' association, told a convention of members Wednesday.

"By the first of August we will see a turn in the tide," Dr. Timm said. "Nine days later we will be enjoying a good business. This is but the first of the storm."

C. H. Burkham, president of the Illinois Coal Dealers' association, addressed the members in the afternoon on the railroad problem.

SEES STEADY HOPE

FOR U. S. BUSINESS
Chicago.—Steady improvement in business conditions is expected by Josiah Kirby of Cleveland Wednesday before the National Association of Real Estate Boards' convention.

"We in America cannot now experience such a prolonged depression as we have for their background an overproduction of finished goods and a shortage of raw materials. Conditions now are exactly reversed."

"Even now, in the so-called dull period, business is so far ahead of 1914 as to make comparisons ridiculous."

SETTLE DISPUTE OVER DRIVEWAY

Concrete Way for Dairy Companies' Use Is Agreed Upon.

Amicable settlement was effected by the city highway committee, Mayor Thomas E. Welsh and City Attorney Roger Cunningham with property owners between Holmes and School street on Center avenue. A conference was held Tuesday, during which an agreement was made to have a common concrete driveway for the Bays and Bowman dairy companies, parallel to Center avenue. The concrete drive will be inside the curb, which is city property, and will provide entrances to the Bowman plant from Holmes street and out Center avenue at the intersection of School street.

The trouble started over a fence erected to protect a grass plot in front of the Bays creamery. The council at the demand of Alderman J. C. Dulin, a resident on Center avenue, ordered that the fence be torn down.

"Apparently the Agreement reached will be for the satisfaction of the dairy and property owners," said City Attorney Cunningham. The cost of the driveway will be paid by the Bowman company, which is a resident on Center avenue, facing Center avenue. Under the new arrangements it is believed congestion of traffic, caused by milk deliveries driving the wrong way on Center avenue, will be eliminated.

"WHERE IS TOURIST CAMP?" ASK MANY FLIVVER TRAVELERS

"Where is the tourist camp?" is a common question asked of the policeman of Janesville by many of the stream of motor travelers passing through this city. Important maps are marked with the information that Janesville possesses such accommodations. There is a disappointed lot, however, say the city guardians of the law, when the tourists find that water, lights and toilets are the only accommodations available. They prefer passing on and "camp on the farm," a term used by the tourists.

The continual stream of motor tourists passing to places of interest in northern parts of the state is undiminished. Illinois still leads the procession.

LONG DENIED $2,750 FOR IMPRISONMENT

Madison.—El J. Long of Racine was denied the $2,750 compensation he claimed for alleged false imprisonment on charge of murder, by Judge E. Ray Stevens in circuit court Wednesday.

The claim was the first ever entered under Wisconsin statute which would allow those falsely imprisoned to recover damages.

The court held that, although Long had served almost two years of his life sentence before finally being acquitted on a new trial, that "within the meaning and intent of the statute he had not served a term of imprisonment under conviction of a crime against the state."

BACK FROM PANAMA TO LIVE IN JANESVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Brownell and their children, Fred and Oscar, returned recently from Ancon, Panama Canal Zone, where they have lived for the past 12 years. Mr. Brownell was in the building construction department of the government work in the zone. He has returned to make his home at 517 Milton avenue. Mr. Brownell says that due to the failure of congress to appropriate any more money for building work in the zone, no construction was being carried on. If the present plans of stationing from 30,000 to 50,000 soldiers there, are carried out, additional barracks will be necessary and Mr. Brownell will doubtless be called back, he thinks.

Council Tables Protest Against Street Watering

If the city insists on sprinkling the downtown streets and presents bill to the merchants for the cost of the service, several retailers plan to refuse to pay. One retailer, it is understood, already has consulted his attorney on the matter.

The petition of the merchant against the sprinkling, on the ground that it is unnecessary, inefficient and costly, was laid on the table by the council Monday night. The Chamber of Commerce, according to Lillian C. Holman, manager, will be at the meeting when the matter again is brought up for discussion and will urge the petitioners be granted.

"While we understand some of the merchants plan to refuse to pay for the sprinkling," stated Mr. Holman Wednesday, "we do not sanction such a course. It is the purpose of the chamber to cooperate with the city council in every way and if the council decides the street sprinkling will continue, the chamber will urge it. Merchant-members to abide by the ordinance."

Build a Community Center and Convention Hall for the city; for athletic, educational, social, and other purposes, and have it belong to the whole city. This is also a part of a program to provide sound and complete facilities for the people of the city. Complete the city plan. Make more small parks and playgrounds and provide at least one large park where the whole people may recreate at will. Camp for auto tourists coming to Janesville or passing through it. Erect a permanent memorial for the soldiers of the World War, suitable and adequate, and preserve the site of the battle of Janesville. Finish the paving of Janesville streets and complete the sewer system. Make all main highways into city of concrete to connect with good pavements in Janesville. Keep the city looking bright and clean with paint and the streets free from filth. Either build a new hotel or increase the facilities of the present hotels so as to take care of the traveling public and be able to handle conventions. Finish the high school at an early date and give the children proper educational facilities.

If you are going away on a vacation arrange to have the Gazette follow you. Notify the Circulation department.

MARKING HISTORICAL PLACES.

It was a fine thing indeed for the Daughters of the American Revolution to mark the site of the St. John home here with a boulder properly inscribed. This is the time and the generation to see that those places of sacred memory in this section of the state are properly marked for information to future peoples of the county. Those who came at the beginning as little children or were born in these first few years of pioneer days, are but a handful—they are fast answering the call and taking up a homestead in a new land. To these men and women who came when the whole prairie was waving with natural flowers and no axe had been laid to the forest round about, we owe a debt of gratitude. They faltered not, neither did hardship deter them, and through them and their industry and foresight we have come to the possession of this wonderful country in which we live.

It is noticed that with lower priced lumber, the toothpick has returned to de rigueur hotels.

KEEPING THE QUALITY UP.

Another reason for the rigid examination of dairy products beside the one of sanitation, is the fact that Wisconsin, now producing 70 per cent of the cheese of the nation, is on trial. The state dairy commissioner, J. Q. Emery, made the startling statement a few days ago, that there was a great lack of care in the manufacture of cheese which was sure to be expensive to the dairymen of the state. He said that cheesemakers with automobiles, hurried the work of the day, took less care with the product, and hastened to get out joy riding. During the war everything and anything went in reference to making cheese. There was a market for any sort of product. Rusty battered cans, seams opened and milk exposed to sun and dirt, carelessness in process of manufacture—all these had been overlooked. But now there must be the most rigid enforcement of all regulations and cheese of the state must be kept up to the high standard which has made it so much in demand throughout the world. All these things which give the public confidence in the Wisconsin products, its butter, its cheese and its milk—are assets so great and so valuable that the public should be impressed with the fact that when they make purchases of these with the Wisconsin brand, they have the best in the world. Regulation and inspection may seem irksome at times but the result will be of the greatest benefit in dollars and cents.

And the geography calls this the temperate zone.

LOTTERIES AND LOTTERIES.

Attorney General Morgan seems to have put a nail in the schemes that have been so rapidly growing wherein a lottery is attached to about every movement for raising money. The newspapers of the state have been constant violators of the lottery laws in reference to the publication of "winnings" and "winning numbers." This is a direct violation of the postal laws. Mr. Morgan has ruled that giving away houses and lots and all that sort of thing, no matter how done, if by the sale of a ticket and it carries the element of chance, is a lottery and against the statutes.

Well, Mr. Cullen, more power to you. The more brick you have the better we'll like you.

JAPAN AND GREAT BRITAIN.

There can be no objection to a treaty of peace and amity, of commercial reciprocity and the usual terms of friendship between Great Britain and Japan. We have several treaties of that character. We have one even now with Germany which has continued since 1823 and as it has never been denounced, remained in force until the declaration of war and by some international lawyers is said to be still in force. Great Britain has several such treaties. The Anglo-Japanese treaty now under discussion is a military convention and if it is signed again will be the only one the British have with any nation in the world. This point is forcefully stated by the Toronto Globe, leader of Canadian thought. It denies that Japan should have the right to ask for such a treaty as a condition of continued friendship. That paper too, opposes the thought of a treaty with the omission of the clause calling on Great Britain to make common war against the enemies of Japan. Even with the omission of a war alliance, Great Britain would be obligated to remain neutral and in case of war with any other nation by Japan, the numerous Pacific ports would be open for the warships of Japan for coaling and shelter. Such a position would react against

THE WHITE HOUSE CHINA

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN

Washington, D. C.—China used by the president—From Canton porcelain plate belonging to George Washington down to pieces of the Wilson state dining set—is now on exhibit in the White House.

A room in the executive mansion, off the ground floor corridor, has been set aside as a collection room and fitted with colonial cabinets. Here, on shelves lined with ivory colored velvet, are 236 pieces of historic glass, silverware and china—souvenirs of every president up to Mr. Harding, with the one exception of Andrew Johnson. As President Johnson is known to have duplicated the Lincoln china for his use, he may be said in a way to be represented by some of the Lincoln souvenirs.

It is too soon for the present executive and his wife to add their contribution to the porcelain hall of fame. Mrs. Harding has not yet selected any china for the White House. Every president's wife buys small sets of china or odd pieces for family use, but it is not likely a new state set will be needed for several years anyway, as the Wilson state set was bought in 1903 by Mrs. Roosevelt and contained about 1,200 pieces. It stood 15 years hard service, but White House china, like any other, gets chipped and sets are broken.

Mrs. Wilson had seen an exhibit of American-made china and determined to order from a New Jersey pottery. Several president's wives before this had thought it would be a democratic thing to buy home-made china, but nothing comparable to the well known foreign makes could be found. That America has finally been able to produce china that is at no disadvantage beside the best of Europe, is shown by the fact that the Wilson set, which was made by Lenox at Trenton, N. J., a number of samples stand near the foreign makes in the White House collection room.

The Wilson set replaced the Roosevelt china in wartime, when little formal entertaining was being done. Later, Mrs. Wilson's illness made big White House dinners impossible, so the set is still practically new.

Finding authentic souvenirs from the table of every president has been no easy task. It was not even easy to identify the china in the White House. The work was begun in 1902, when Mrs. Abby Gunn Baker, who has for some years been interested in historic Washington, began to catalogue the White House ware.

Up to that time, the old punch bowls, platters, and other antiques in the White House closets were but vaguely associated with past presidents. In some instances, the history of a valuable piece was not remembered or recorded at all. When stock was taken, it was found a number of administrations had left no souvenirs of their tableware. Mrs. Baker found china of only seven dining sets—those of Lincoln and later presidents. Apparently only White House china had not been regarded with any eye to its historic importance.

President Washington set a precedent in this connection when he held a sale on moving from the executive mansion in New York to Philadelphia.

Gradually, antique dealers saw possibilities in White House china and in copying it. But many stores in Washington were selling "authentic" White House plates by Mrs. Roosevelt's time that she put a stop to White House china sales. The design of the Roosevelt state dining set was patented so that it could not, like other White House sets, be copied in cheap ware. This copying became a nuisance in the time of President Hayes, when the most elaborate dinner set ever made for the White House was designed. This was a pictorial set, each piece bearing a scene, or some animal, bird or fish. The idea was to represent the flora and fauna of every state. The china was of a beautiful quality and the designs were artistic, but they were copied in cheap china and sold.

Luckily, presidential souvenirs have been treasured in the families of the presidents, and their descendants have been generous in turning over some of their relics to the government. It may be said here that nothing has been, or will be, bought for this china collection. Everything that was not taken from White House cabinets and china closets has been donated or loaned.

The mistresses of the White House of late years have been eager to see the china collection established. As far back as 1845, when Mrs. Harrison, a cabinet to hold historic White House china, was talked of. Finally, Mrs. Roosevelt started the collection and had two cabinets made. At the same time she asked Mrs. Baker to select the most worthy souvenirs in the White House and to catalogue them. The first Mrs. Wilson planned a special room for the presidential china exhibit. It remained for the second Mrs. Wilson actually to have the room prepared and to install the china.

The china of the presidents is perhaps more a souvenir of the first ladies of the land than of their husbands. There is in the collection, for instance, one of the Harrison plates with its ornate and gilded decoration, reminiscent of Mrs. Harrison's love for gold and her desire that it should become the national flower.

On the other hand, there is a Cincinnati plate of the Washingtons, which is reminiscent of the general and of his founding of the Order of the Cincinnati. In his time it was a popular custom to use all sorts of insignia on articles of personal use, and Washington had a dining set made with the figure of Justice bearing the badge of the Cincinnati.

Both Washington and Jefferson sent to Paris to obtain such things as ornaments and silverware.

One of the most interesting objects in the china collection is a fruit dish which has long been in the White House and is now identified as one of the Madison dishes, probably one saved by the level headed Madame Dolly when the capital was attacked by the British. An employee of the White House remembered seeing the dish in use in Lincoln's time. Later it disappeared and Mrs. Harrison found it in the attic in three pieces and had it repaired.

Canada, continues the Globe, and in case of war with the United States would lead to great complications and the enmity of its neighbor.

Great Britain has no such treaty with the United States. Nor has she such a treaty with France or Italy. The Globe well inquires as to why Japan exacts such a treaty as a price of her continued friendship. The Globe should realize that but for the treaty with Great Britain the ambitions of Japan to rule the Pacific can never be realized. Behind such a treaty there would go forward that program of assimilation of other islands and other territory in Siberia and China, and we would have added Koreans and Shantung to the territory taken by either might or sharp diplomacy. Without such a treaty, with Great Britain sharing Japan's territorial aggrandizement as an accessory at least after the fact, Japan would continue a most irritating obstructionist.

Janesville's policeman with his collar buttoned up and standing in the hot sun has either the effect to drive out the perspiration on the beholder or convince him that the weather is largely imagination.

About the coolest place in Wisconsin on Tuesday was in Janesville. It is something of a summer resort anyhow.

With gasoline down, the city will be able to economize a little.

JUST FOLKS

THE GREATER PEACE.

I have lived long enough to learn
The things which are of great concern,
And I would wish them down today
For him who follows in my way:
I would impress upon his mind
The things that come of being kind
And I would teach him there's no fame
That can excel an honored name.

Unto the eyes of youth it seems
That most important are its dreams,
Yet high-born dreams come tumbling down
And few attain the world's renown.
And even those who reach the goal
Through many a troubled hour:
The thing that counts through peace and strife
Is, above all, a well-lived life.

Better by far than glory faded,
To meet all men unshamed;
Greater than fortune's glittering gold
Is love of friends when man is old.
Who gains his neighbors' high esteem
Need never mourn some broken dream.
Who knows true friends are standing by
His peace which wealth cannot supply.

As Time, the great teacher of us all,
Shows us her glories, large and small,
Methinks that we once thought splendid, pales
And the great joy of conquest fades:
The kinder days of long ago
He knows true glory at the end
Who's played the man and played the friend.

Who's Who Today.

GEN. JAN CHRISTIAN SMUTS.

Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, premier of the Union of South Africa and often referred to as "the British empire's greatest living statesman," is in the present peace negotiations between England and Ireland. Smuts' role is that of a mediator. He is a native of South Africa, but he was born in London. A few days ago he stated that he considered the prospects bright for lasting peace in Ireland.

General Smuts was not born a Briton, but became one when his native Transvaal was annexed by England after the Boer war. In this war Smuts served with the Boer army with great distinction.

General Smuts was born in 1870, and was educated at Christ's college, Cambridge. Following his admission to the bar he hung out his shingle at Johannesburg, Transvaal. In 1896, Defeat of the Boers did not embitter him, and he became one of the world's foremost statesmen. In 1916 he was given command of the British forces operating in German East Africa and annihilated the German power there. In 1918 he was chosen the first premier of the Union of South Africa, a position he has since held.

The Rockefeller's father and son, are Baptist laymen of large influence in their denomination. And what the Rockefeller Foundation does never can be divorced from the spirit and past of the Rockefeller's so long as either of them is living.

Bearing these suggestions in mind, the allotment of $200,000 by the Foundation to Columbia College, Dubuque, under the name of the Rockefeller Foundation, becomes an epochal incident in the gradual development of religious tolerance in the gradual elimination of the old divisions of Protestants by Catholics and of Catholics by Protestants. Old-time Baptists may wonder what the Rev. Dr. Edward Bright would have said of such a benefaction. In an Examiner editorial, Brooklyn, Baptists, who are in the Hanson Place Church and the Centennial Church in the Clermont Avenue Rink can almost hear the vibrant comments of the Rev. Dr. Justin D. Fulton, whose words were: "Why Priests, Shave, Wed, and Washington in the Lap of Rome" had wide circulation. But optimism must restrain itself. With this announcement, in the news columns of the same day, comes the news that a Roman Catholic, Senator Tom Watson of Georgia, has established the headquarters of his anti-Catholic newspaper, the Sentinel, in his Capitol Building office. BRONCHITIS FROM SINUSITIS

Old Doctor Brunkley's almanacs and that widely read biographical work "Letters of a Ship" have familiarized the public with the situation of the bronchial tube and the sinuses. The almanacs show that these tubes are somehow susceptible to all varieties of season, climate and weather. But very few people know what a sinus is. In the first place, it is a cavity in the body, through many a troubled hour. The thing that counts through peace and strife is, above all, a well-lived life.

ASK US

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing to the Editor of the Janesville Gazette, P. O. Box 100, Janesville, Wis.)
Q. What is the lightest gas known?
A. Hydrogen.
Q. The Bureau of standards says that hydrogen occurs in the air to some extent. This is the lightest gas known. The second lightest gas, helium, occurs in small amounts. Nitrogen is the lightest gas occurring in sufficient quantity to materially affect the density of the air.
Q. Are there any major adjustments now similar to the one established by the United States railroad administration?
A. The transportation act of 1920 provided for the establishment of an advisory board by agreement between railroad management and railway workers. To date, however, no such board has been established. The railway board is a body of five members, appointed by the president, who have the right to make recommendations to the government.
Q. Why does ice float on water?
A. The density of ice is less than that of water, and for this reason it floats.
Q. What can be done to a person who has a reputation article?
A. A person so marking an article is liable to a penalty of not less than $100 and could, to be received in a suit, be liable to the amount going to the informant and half to the government.
Q. How many eggs does an oyster lay?
A. An average oyster produces about 10,000,000 eggs, a very large oyster sometimes producing 60,000,000.
Q. Why is Dante's "Divine Comedy" called "comedy"?
A. The word "comedy" is here based on the English equivalent of the Italian "comedia," which means a play or drama.
Q. What is Haddon Hall?
A. The original Haddon Hall is two miles southeast of Bakewell, Derbyshire, England. It belongs to the Dukes of Rutland and is a notable example of the medieval residence of a great English proprietor.
Q. What will remove mercury from old mirrors?
A. The Bureau of standards says nitric acid should be used to remove the old mercury from old mirrors only if they were made when tin amalgam was used. For the more modern mirrors they suggest the use of a solution of potassium cyanide in photography, such as "hypo" and potassium ferrioxalate (red prussiate of potash).
Q. What part of an animal is the sweetbread?
A. Sweetbread is the name of the thymus or pancreas of an animal (especially a calf) used for food, the former being the throat sweetbread or neck sweetbread, the latter being the stomach sweetbread.
Q. How long did Benjamin Franklin attend school?
A. Benjamin Franklin attended school for 2 years, from the ages of 8 and 10 was all the time that Benjamin Franklin attended school.

Q. Have the capitalists of the country an organization which corresponds to the American Federation of Labor?

HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, 1921.

Uranus and Mercury hold trine in the afternoon of this day, according to astrology. Neptune is in a rising position.

The death of an editor of great influence and influence seems to be foreboded by the stars.

Although it is the 13th of the month, rare good luck is supposed to attend contracts, agreements and leases signed under this rule of the stars.

The mind should be alert and keen, especially when writing or speaking, require an orderly marshalling of thought.

Honors to writers, long predicted, may lead to some sort of diplomatic blunder. The signs are most sinister here, tact and wisdom are required.

Neptune is in an aspect red as sinister. Sins, intrigue, deception and double dealing are supposed to be encouraged by the sway.

Misadventures to ships, which have been long predicted, because of the conjunction of the luminaries with Mars, will mark the next few weeks as well as earlier dates.

A very famous woman will close her career before the end of the summer, if the stars are read aright.

South Africa, which is under Cancer, may suffer from drought, as well as from political conditions that are unfortunate.

The position of Jupiter and Saturn denote the greatest unrest in the circles and serious developments may change the system of organization.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will travel or remove with success. Financial affairs should be most satisfactory during the coming year. Young widows will have offers of marriage.

Children born on this day may be restless and fond of change. These subjects of Cancer are usually successful in employment on the water.

SOLDIERS SEEKING ARMY DISCHARGE

Reduction Plan Brings 1700
Applications at Camp Grant.

Regular army soldiers are finding the red discharge chevrons to be popular, for 1,700 enlisted men have requested discharge from Camp Grant under the new army regulation under which the army is to be reduced to 150,000. Several Camp Grant regiments will be disbanded and the other regiments will be reduced in size. The order that enlisted men could be discharged brought a flood of applications at all army camps and to date 600 have been released from Camp Grant. The reduction again gives credence to a report of closing the Rockford camp.

The personnel strength of Camp Grant is now 5,933 enlisted men with 1,100 still on the waiting list to be discharged.

Discharge Mills Work. Many Rock county youths who joined the Sixth division are either being discharged or have been given their release from Camp Grant. Many soldiers after preparing their applications, however, reflected, and asked persons to withdraw their discharge application.

It is the first time since the demobilization period of the Great War that the discharging "mills" of the army are working. The making of applications is given a ten day leave of absence before being given their discharge papers. This has been done to give the soldiers opportunity to go to their homes for a few days and look for work before finally serving their connections with the army.

Navy is Reducing. The navy also is making plans for reduction. No recruits have been taken into the navy; rather army recruiting agents have been given orders to keep a waiting list of enlisted men desiring to enter the service.

The marines are also reducing their forces, many old time "leathernecks" quitting after being in the service from 15 to 20 years.

Why

Do people build a frame house?
It loses in value each year.
And is a constant source of expense.

WHEN A FRAME HOUSE

BURNS
there is nothing left but the brick chimney.

When a brick house catches fire nothing burns but the woodwork.

Which construction is the cheaper?

Let us give you many reasons why a Brick House is the cheapest and best.

'THE GIRL WHO HAD NOCHANCE'

By Marion Rubincam

CHAPTER LXXIII.
NEW PEOPLE.
Next morning the girl put on the stunning blue suit with its gray fur that came high around her face, selected gray shoes and stockings and gray suede gloves, and a little fuzzy blue hat that was the most fetching thing she had ever seen.
She stood in front of the mirror, looking at herself. To every woman that sensation comes once in a lifetime—the sensation of seeing herself suddenly of the desirable fashion plate smartness, of seeing herself suddenly transformed into someone very pretty, very attractive.
Ruth had thought little of her looks. But the rich furs, the snug hat, the expensive suit—above all, the correct touches that made her outfit so very lovely, the shoes and gloves, the silk stockings that showed her what a slim and graceful ankle she had—these things made the girl look at herself in a new way. She did not regret now the money that was gone. She only wished, suddenly, that Langley was there to see her in all her gorgeousness.
On her way out she paused to bury her face in the bowl of roses that somehow were sent there by him.
Then she forgot her clothes and her new prettiness, and gave her whole mind to the task she had been sent to do.
She made calls upon several men whose names she had. She talked house building, looked over their plans, took copies of their estimates and made notes of their suggestions. She discussed draining a creek and building a canal for footings down raw material. She saw a new architect and made corrections in his plans for some buildings in the new town. When the war don't last forever," he said. "When it's over, your war work will end and you'll have a lot of empty houses on your hands. Why do you want to put so much money in them?"
They had gone out to luncheon, to discuss the affair while they ate. It was a downtown restaurant, and very handsome to Ruth's eyes.
"I'm not building for the present but for the future," Ruth said. "After the war, we'll attract other people. We have conditions under which people can work. Costs more to build a substantial house than a shack, but it costs no more to build a beautiful row of houses than an ugly row—except the architect's fee. That's why I'm selecting you—you can give me something artistic."
The man gave in. And that afternoon the new plans were begun, after she had made some rough sketches of what she wanted.
Ruth was to stay in the city until the new plans were in good enough shape for her to approve them. That meant a visit of about once a day to the architect's office. He was a tall and rather a fine looking chap, and Ruth liked him immensely. In her own mind, she compared him with Langley because he possessed straight yellow hair.
That afternoon a Mr. Cooper called on her at the hotel. He was head of the largest contracting firm in the city, and his conversation fascinated the young girl. Mr. Cooper did not talk about the building of one house or block of houses, he talked of the building of whole cities. He created entire towns where there had been flat fields, he raised factories and work shops where there had been nothing but sticks and stones. Ruth listened to him with her eyes shining. This man waved a lead pencil in the air and it was like a magic wand creating a city to house thousands. He made rough sketches on the sheets of blank paper spread out before him, and stores, halls, homes and work shops fairly grew out of his fingers.
"It takes a surprisingly little time," he said, "because many parts of the building can be made in stock sizes and fitted together. We make parts in sufficient variety so that there is no monotony in the buildings when they are finished. I can supply you with a city in Dutch Colonial or in the Old English Cottage manner or any one of half a dozen periods of architecture."
Ruth looked at the rough sketches he had made on the paper. "You talk like a magician," she said. "How long does it take?" Mr. Cooper mentioned the time—a period so short that it made Ruth feel more than ever that he was some sort of magician. He rushed a magic lamp and made cities spring up like mushrooms.
"But will the houses be substantial?"
He went into a long explanation as to how the buildings were made in parts and fitted together, and that all the parts were well made of the best material.
"I'll motor over to your 'plant,'" he said, "and you can see whole villages lying about in classified piles; so many thousands large windows in one pile, so many small windows in another, sizes of houses already fitted together and lying stacked up ready to be shipped."
"In other words," Ruth said, "you send me a whole town out in small pieces like a jigsaw puzzle and when we get the pieces out to Marktown you send workmen along to fit the pieces together and make buildings out of them."
"That's it exactly," he answered. He gave some directions to several men who had accompanied him, and sent the man back to his office. It was nearly 5 o'clock.
"Are you going to be engaged this evening, may I ask?" he turned to Ruth.
She hesitated. "I had thought of looking up some old friends," she answered, and her face grew a little pale at the idea.

Buck sat beside him, gawking at the cold and the blistering heat from the glowing stove had whirled his cheeks to a fiery red which seemed not enough to singe his ruffled hair. He attacked the stove-must as he would have gone at a stubbornly unyielding piece of ground with pick and shovel.

Buck and Farnum were the first to vent Delaney's attitude and they displayed the most determined fighting front.

"The cards weren't shuffled," cried Buck, throwing his hand on the table. A new deal.

"You've got the same chances as the rest of us," broke in Eddie Farnum, who had three tens.

"I ain't so sure of that," growled Bill.

Delaney laid down the pack and turned violently toward him.

"What did you say?" he demanded in a tone of enforced amicability.

"I said it," returned Bill aggressively, "and if it sticks in anybody's craw, I hope they'll choke."

The men shifted in their chairs.

"Listen," warned Cavendish suddenly, cocking his head on one side. A wild scream rose above the howling of the wind. Muffled at first it grew to piercing shrillness and each shriek seemed to bring it nearer the cabin.

"A woman," said Barney, throwing open the door and peering into the dense yellow curtain of the fog.

A blast of cold wind rushed into the room, scattering cards and whirling every movable article about on its mad course. Their attention was riveted upon an insufficiently clad figure which rushed into the cabin and fell gasping to the floor.

"What is it?" asked Buck, as he stopped to sort out the woman from the cards which partly covered her.

"She's a woman," exclaimed Barney. "Well, boys, ain't what do you make of it?"

"You'll make a corpse of it," answered Kleath. "If you don't give her a drink and shut the door." He started at the work of resuscitation. "She's as nearly frozen as I ever want to be."

In a short time, however, Mrs. Wade, a half-breed who enjoyed the distinction of being the poorest resident of Dawson, revived sufficiently to explain her presence there.

"Kleath," she said, "mumbled."

"Wantshquish—shil—reshbodeh... carry me—out—out!"

She indicated her scant attire and feet which were bare save for an old pair of woolen socks. "Lock—maybe bury."

"After—on Pinkie was cold," translated Kleath, "and tried to take the quilts from the children's beds. Is that it? And you would not let him take them—just so he picked you up and put you outside and locked the door. Is that right? And you want us to put you back in the house for fear the children will freeze for he'll do them some harm. Is that it?"

The woman made frantic, affirmative gestures. She dragged him in a zig-zag course to the door and flung it open. He broke away long enough to pick up his coat and throw it around the astonished woman's shoulders.

All six men fought their way to the Wade cabin, stumbling, slipping and falling on the snow-covered trail.

"We'll bust open the door," said Buck. "Get out of the way, boys. Here goes."

But the woman threw herself against him and cried shrilly:

"No, no! For God sake, don't! Seize Pinkie—he do awful thing!"

"Yes, I suppose she's right," said Buck. "But how the devil are we to get in without making a noise?"

If the children's beds had been stripped of their coverings, there was no chance of their living through the night. If a sudden and violent gust of wind to the cabin were checked, Pinkie would have ample opportunity to take a horrible revenge before the men could get their bearings in the dark and overpower him.

She fumbled around the window sill and presently finding his hand, thrust a large rusty screw into it. Barney and Bill Buck managed to shield the face from a match at his fingers while he unlocked the door. At first the pain in his gloveless fingers keeping against cold metal, was almost unbearable. At last, however, Kleath squeezed the fingers of his right hand hard about the little bit of steel with the fingers of his left hand and gave a desperate jerk. The key on the other side of the door flew into a clatter. The lock turned. The men trooped into the cabin.

PROPER HAIR TONICS

Pilocarpine Hydrochloride .30 grains
 Croscoll (Lilly) .30 grains
 Croscoll (Lilly) .30 drops
 Castor oil .10 drops
 Alcohol (95 per cent) .4 ounces
 The following is a list of the ingredients of the hair tonic which is the best of its kind. It is a valuable hair tonic for the scalp and the hair, and it is a valuable hair tonic for the scalp and the hair, and it is a valuable hair tonic for the scalp and the hair.

This is the best hair tonic that I personally know of. It is a valuable hair tonic for the scalp and the hair, and it is a valuable hair tonic for the scalp and the hair, and it is a valuable hair tonic for the scalp and the hair.

Unfortunately, Pilocarpine is sometimes hard to obtain. But even without it this is a valuable hair tonic since it contains castor oil, which is a valuable hair tonic for the scalp and the hair, and it is a valuable hair tonic for the scalp and the hair.

I usually advise a hair tonic of some sort even when the hair is healthy because it acts as a sort of insurance against any illness which might hurt the hair, and against old age and falling hair. Rubbing the tonic on with the right before you shampoo it may be the only tonic you need. Massaging the scalp every few days is a gentle stimulation in itself a tonic. One very good thing is that it is a tonic to rub the scalp occasionally with tar water, which is nothing more than a tablespoonful of tar purchased at a drug store, poured into a pint bottle and diluted with water. The tar does not dissolve, but some of it gets into the water and it makes dark hair very soft and pretty.

Thin—The yeast will relieve your condition and you will likely assimilate the food you eat, which is now being so poorly digested that you cannot take on weight. Take three yeast cakes each day, either dissolved in water or spread on crackers. As you dislike meat, you probably should

BILLY WHISKERS

At three o'clock, when Violet went out to have them looked up, no Billy was to be found. Nannie, lying asleep in the sun on a bundle of straw, the hired man and stable boy were both questioned as to where they had seen Billy last, but neither of them had seen him since he was eating his dinner, apparently as contented as Nannie now was.

The cause of Billy's disappearance was this: He had not been in any town for a long time, and he was curious to see how things looked in a village once more. He decided to go on an exploring tour. To do this was easy for a goat with Billy's intelligence and ability to overcome obstacles. When he whispered to Nannie what he was going to do, she objected as usual, and asked him how he could get out of the yard they were in, as it was surrounded by an extremely high paling.

"Watch me and I will show you. Then after I am gone, you lie down and take a nap. Don't 'bail' after me, so as to attract attention, for I will be back in time to start for home at the unexpected time. Now, watch me, and see how easily I can get out of your high-fenced yard."

First he climbed upon a pile of boards that lay beside the fence, and from there he jumped upon the roof of a shed that led to another were the benches arranged in a semi-circle before a high platform, in the center of which sat a large fat man in a great chair, cutting out in loud voice, as he pounded on the table with his gavel:

"Silence in the court room! Silence in the court room!"

"This reported in loud tones, for over one giggled, stamped and shouted when Billy's head loomed up unexpectedly behind him.

Today's Short Story

The Awakening of Henry Brandyce

Some men are like prisms: they make the world more bright and colorful for having lived. Others may have a gorgeous rainbow heart, but without the prismatic equipment for radiating the bright gleams.

This latter type of man was Henry Brandyce. He had everyone's respect, of which he was cognizant; and also possessed the admiration of his secretary, Janet Coyle, to which he was equally blind. In other words, he had neither the power of transmitting heart beams, nor of receiving.

Janet alone knew there was crystal glory within Brandyce. She knew this from his grave courtesy toward her and his unsmiling kindness toward elevator men and office boys.

Brandyce was chief of staff in the advertising agency of Brown & McElwain. He was without a peer as a business strategist, and he could not only formulate an effective advertising campaign, but wrote the copy himself—advertisements that had a built-in character behind them that they seemed to be cold chisellings in marble.

Miss Coyle had gone to her lunch hour one noon and Brandyce was preparing to go to his office with a package. "We have a new client in the National Health School for Women," he said. They were a dignified campaign, and yet they sent us over a bunch of frivolous females in black underwear for illustrations in their copy. You might look through this bunch of stuff if you feel inclined, why go to it, old man; otherwise, snoot it back to me."

When Mr. Brown had left, and with unusual impulsiveness, Brandyce opened the package. He took out 50 large photographs of pretty young women in gymnasium lights. These he placed hurriedly about the office, leaning one against the telephone, others against the wall, two on the chair of Miss Coyle and some on her desk.

He pondered sheepishly over the display of supple loveliness. He had never imagined women before in this light—without cold dignity; indeed, scampering about as vigorously as boys. Gentlemen, too; not actresses posing for sensation. Was it really the quest for health and the grace of youth demanding this exercise? He thought of the trapeze in the barn when he was a boy. If there had been a girl—

"Why, Mr. Brandyce?" It was Miss Coyle. He had not in a fashionable evening dress, surrounded by the bizarre photographs during the entire lunch hour. Consternation held Brandyce. "If you'll give me those ladies in your chair and on your desk. I'll hide them before any strangers come."

He pondered sheepishly over the display of supple loveliness. He had never imagined women before in this light—without cold dignity; indeed, scampering about as vigorously as boys. Gentlemen, too; not actresses posing for sensation. Was it really the quest for health and the grace of youth de-

Heart and Home Problems

 BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
 Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Last summer I went to summer school for my diploma in home economics. Afternoon, I had a lovely teacher and I liked her very much. The last day of school when I said good-bye to her, she asked me to write to her.

I wrote and I received an answer. In her letter she told me to be sure to write again. I wrote a couple of times after that before I received an answer, but then she apologized saying my letter had been mislaid and she had been without my address. She said that if I wrote she would answer me very soon.

I wrote to her before Christmas, a Christmas card, and a letter after Christmas. The letter I wrote last was just a few lines, asking her if she would please answer. I don't think that would make her angry.

Please tell me what to do, for it has been over four months since she wrote. I want to correspond with her very much and the way she wrote to me it seemed as though she enjoyed hearing from me. I am quite certain she has not moved away and that my letters failed to reach her on account of that.

If I ever meet her, should I be friendly? I am fifteen years old and I think she is in the twenties. I know I am only child compared to her, but even then I wouldn't treat anybody that way when I asked her to write.

RIGHT OR WRONG.

The teacher was sincere in wanting to hear from you and believed at the time she would write. Probably, however, she finds herself burdened with work and unable to keep up her correspondence. Besides, new interests have come into her life. She is kept busy by other pupils, if she is still teaching, and she finds them very interesting, too.

I would advise you to forgive her. Do not write again until next Christmas. At that time it would be all right to send a Christmas card.

Without a doubt she will be very glad to hear from you. Of course, she should be friendly if you meet again.

Obey your parents since they have forbidden you to keep company with the young man. I would advise you to aim higher in your friendships. Something is wrong with the young man's character or he would not have stooped to a thing which was so bad it made the whole town talk. Tell him to earn the friendship of respectable girls by rising above the sort of thing he has just done.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of eighteen and have been keeping company with a fellow four years my senior for the past six months. The fellow seemed to be very nice and respectful, but in the past three weeks there has been a little trouble between us. Soon after our trouble he went with another girl who was not very respectable. Of course this became the talk of the town, which put me in a very bad place.

Wooton Stars When Tractors Snow Galena Under, 16-3

Copyright 1920 by Geo. McManus.

WOOTON IS STAR ON MOUND AND WITH BIG STICK

Galena, Wis.—Invading the Wisconsin town of Galena, the Janesville Tractors Tuesday handed the home team of that place a handsome rubbing to the total of 16 to 3.

Leading in the swiftest was Pitcher Jack Wooton, who supplemented some chunky mound work by poling out a home run. Not content with the extra long drive, he pumped away with a triple, and two singles in four innings, could gather off the deliveries of Jack was five scattered bingles. Wooton is looking exceptionally good these days.

Second baseman Holland was enlisted as catcher in the absence of Ray Shook, the regular "bushel basket." Reckoning on some good work, he seemed to mean going out in the field to fill the gap.

Despite the intensely hot weather, the Tractors are putting up a good brand of ball. In the first week of the summer of barnstorming, it is on to Prospect, Ill., Wednesday. Then they come back to the Barager state Thursday and play at Plattville.

MOSTL TOO BRAVE. SIX ARE BEATEN: CUBS LOSE IN 10TH

Knocking out Bush in the first inning and leading the second, Cleveland took a double header from Boston Tuesday, 7 to 1 and 6 to 3.

It took 16 innings for the Tigers to defeat Philadelphia, but they did it. The long smacks were enough to win for the Yankees over St. Louis, 8 to 4.
